

SOUND AND THE SACRED

FINAL PROJECT

Length: 1500–2000 words (excluding “further reading” section)

Due: Friday, December 5, 2025

ASSIGNMENT

For your final project, you have selected an example of religious sound, broadly defined, within a broader religio-cultural context largely unfamiliar to you. Prepare an analysis of your chosen religious sound example as a page on our Canvas site for other students to view; include relevant links, images, maps, and/or embedded media. Your project should minimally consist of the following components:

- Broad sociocultural context
- Embedded media (notated or graphic score, audiovisual clip, field recording, playlist, etc.)
- Sonic analysis
- Religious and/or spiritual significance
- Further reading/listening/viewing (not included in length requirement)

Your grade depends, in part, on the extent to which your project reflects my and your peers’ feedback on your proposal, annotated bibliography, outline, and sonic analysis draft, as well as the extent to which it makes use of the technological/multimedia affordances of a web-based report.

SUBMISSION AND FORMAT

I have created a page for each of you in Canvas in the Final Projects module; this is where you will prepare your final project. Complete your assignment by 1:35 p.m. on Friday, December 5, at which point your project will be visible on Canvas to all of your classmates. All quotes and references must be properly cited; follow any style guide with which you are familiar as long as you are consistent. Email me or schedule an appointment to discuss any questions you have about the assignment.

The final project is cumulatively worth 25% of your final grade.
